CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

THE COURT AND ITS FURNITURE

Around this tabernacle was a court inside a fence made of white linen, one hundred and fifty feet long, seventy-five feet wide and seven and one-half feet high. It had a gate to the east. There hung a curtain embroidered just like the first covering of the top of the tabernacle and the two veils.

In the court were two pieces of furniture.

First, the brazen altar on which the sacrifices were offered. Between the brazen altar and the tabernacle was the basin of water or laver, as it was called. Here the priests washed after offering the sacrifices and before going into the tabernacle.

Again these speak of Jesus Christ.

First; in the brazen altar upon which the sacrifices were offered every day for the sins of the people of Israel. Jesus Christ was God's sacrifice upon the cross to take away the sin of the world.

Surely in the laver we have a beautiful picture of Jesus Christ the One who cleanses us from all sin.
